ENEMY'S RETREAT FROM THE MARNE.

RESISTANCE STIFFENS
GERMAN TROOPS FOR RUSSIAN FRONT.

The Press Association, dealing with tary situation, says that the enemy's r has been very skilfully conducted, and not lost any large quantity of guns, he has had to abandon a great material and ammunition and a large of bridging material, which had been north of the Marne, indicating his int effect the passage of the Marne in great and to advance south of the river direction of Paris.

During the 27th and 28th the retire fairly rapid, but on the 29th the an stance stiffened. He undertook several attacks, notably a very heavy one on Sergy (south of Fere on Tardieu) and on Americans. That attack was really a heavy loss to the Germans, as the Allies made practically no progress at all, and the Germans counter-attacked and in taking the station of Fere on Tardieu the 21st, however, the Germans fell in the pocket, they had been occupying the southern portion of the salient, and they captured the wood known as the Bois and the village of Clerges.

Fighting is now proceeding, but the news is to what has happened to-day.

ENEMY'S UNFAVOURABLE POSITION.

which are being bombarded and by the Allies' airmen, and the only rail line over the river at Mazy, not including the Soissons railway bridge, which he at all, is also under fire from French guns on the heights. His communications are, therefore, very precarious, especially via railroad south of the river. There is no definite indication that he intends to retire any further with the one possible indication that he has left the villages in the area south-east of which may point to his intention to retire, the whole, however, the probability means to retire in his own time.

Since the beginning of the battle of the Germans have used seventy-one Fresh divisions at the disposal of the Front, between Montdidier and the only amount to some twenty divisions though it is possible that the Germans their remaining reserves in a fresh assault effort would be a desperate and would entail very grave risks that passes reduces the chance of it of such an offensive.

How greatly the relative situation Allies and of the Germans has been during the past fortnight since the battle by the very striking success of General the rapid development of the Anders army may be judged from the fact that in time during the course of this year's opening on March 21st, the fresh rear disposal of the Allies considerably outbalanced the disposal of the enemy. In spite of the fact that the enemy, of course, has a substantial numerical superiority, he is wholly on the defensive.

Even if the enemy is unable to us further offensive on the west, he can transfer troops to other theatres, always possible that he may undertake during the next few months either in the Balkans. There is no inde-

GERMAN-RUSSIAN SITUATION
The Germans have now 201 on the Western front, but they may to transport troops to the west. In Northern Russia there are indications that the Germans will shortly adopt the a conjunction with the Finns against the part of the Murman. The situation changed, and they may attack within few months. In Finland there is a hostility among the population to the Albanians, Italians and Russians.

straightened out those fronts before Uchida and the Adriatic. Two days Austrians undertook an attack with reinforcements, and they have driven about 100 miles, and the line now is 200 miles north of Berat. With the Balkans, there has been evidence of the Bulgarian Army, especially when been asked to undertake an offensive. It was a short time ago in preparation for the Monastir front, but it never owing to the refusal of the troops. All these are very favourable signs.

Mr. Dunn, expressing his regret that the reference was made in the factory, said the Chief Secretary had not asked for a representative of the Roman Catholics of national schools.

Mr. Shortt—I have not done that. The Committee sufficiently large, as interests of the managers were sufficiently guarded by the presence of Dr. O'Connell the Bishop of Tuam, but I have sent it the Committee this, when they represent the interests of the managers and representatives of the managers is pointed out.
